CROWDFUND the NATIONAL DEBT

A PERSONAL APPEAL FROM PRESIDENT BARACK OBAMA

My fellow Americans,

Despite the best efforts of my administration, prolonged partisan debates in Congress are preventing us from a solution to our mounting national debt. Instead of bickering over taxes, we're taking a new approach: asking everyday Americans to chip in so we can pay off our debt once and for all.

With your help, it's time to act.

JT: I know where he can get the money to pay of the national debt. Print it like he's been doing. It's commie economics Barry the Bonzo. By the way, I'll pay off the national debt in exchange for trying you for treason and convicting you, and then a public hanging. I've heard that scum can hang. Oh my goodness, was that racist?

We read at <http://www.abc.net.au/news/2013-04-03/obama-announces-brain-mapping-project/4607264> that Obama wants to map the human brain. There will be a 100 million dollar research grant. Obama says, "I don't want our children or grandchildren to look back on this day and wish we had done more to keep America at the cutting edge." "I want them to look back and be proud that we took some risks, that we seized this opportunity." "As humans we can identify galaxies light-years away. We can study particles smaller than an atom, but we still haven't unlocked the mystery of the three pounds of matter that sits between our ears."

JT: When one considers Obama's and Planned Parenthood's stance on abortions, there won't be many children or grandchildren. Exclusive photos of what is truly between POLDS' and Barack Hussein Obama's ears are at <http://www.hshartampa.org/whatsthepoop.html>.

From the April 2013 issue of The Obama Timeline: The comments in parentheses are by Don Fredrick of The Obama Timeline.

The Associated Press declares it will no longer use the term "illegal immigrant" when writing reports about... illegal immigrants. Reporters are told to "use illegal only to refer to an action, not a person: illegal immigration, but not illegal immigrant. Acceptable variations include living in or entering a country illegally or without legal permission." (The AP will no doubt continue to use the phrase "right wing extremists," but will perhaps start calling jaywalkers "people who cross the street without permission.") HotAir.com wonders if AP will call illegal immigrants "strangers from beyond" or "friends you haven't met yet," and observes, "[I]f push comes to shove, 'future Democratic voters' probably wins on accuracy." (Other replacement terms suggested by Twitter users: "Border jumpers." "National intruders." "National trespassers." "Welcome and honored guests of America who are not here legally but we really, really like." "'Drug addict' is out. Please use 'Person who consumes a more-than-optimal quantity of narcotics.'" "We will stop using 'illiterate.'" The preferred nomenclature is now 'Person who has chosen to forego learning their letters.'" "In sports, 'losing team' to be replaced by 'team that scored the fewest points but probably tried really hard.'" "Tax increase now 'expansion of fair share contribution.'" "America-hating fascist' will now be known as 'Professor.'" "Postpartum infanticide should be referred to as proactive healthcare cost containment." "Illegal aliens are now 'People Who Just Happen To Be In The Country After Sneaking In.'" "Car thieves are now called 'Vehicle Relocation Specialists.'" "Comrade Obama' will now be known as 'the Messiah.'" "Murders will now be called 'after-life creators.'" "Mexicans' will now be known as 'Americans in waiting.'" "The Soviet Union' will now be known as 'the winners of the Cold War.'" "Stalker' is now to be 'Person who really just wants to be loved, and that's okay.'" "Murderer is out. The term 'accused of unlawfully ceasing the life of another' preferred.") Note: The Obama Timeline suggests that Associated Press employees should no longer be called "reporters" or "journalists."

JT: My suggestion is that they should be called OPIS – Obama Propaganda Idiots!

The Chicago Tribune is reporting that Jeremiah Wright's daughter has allegedly been a naughty little money launderer, and if true, it would appear as though her chickens are coming home to roost.

Jeri Wright, 47, faces two counts of money laundering, two counts of making false statements to officers and seven counts of giving false grand jury testimony. She couldn't immediately be reached for comment.

Federal prosecutors in the Illinois' central district say Jeri Wright received about $28,000 in grant-tied paychecks in 2009, but $20,000 of that was deposited back into accounts controlled by Evans. Prosecutors also say Wright then lied to officers and a grand jury.

"Lumps of Cells That Learn and Remember

Possibly the scariest thing about moonbats is that they are morally capable of killing their own babies. People who can have their own children's skulls crushed and brains sucked out for the sake of convenience aren't going to have a problem doing even worse things to you.

To quote Mother Teresa:

"I feel that the greatest destroyer of peace today is abortion, because it is a war against the child — a direct killing of the innocent child — murder by the mother herself. And if we accept that a mother can kill even her own child, how can we tell other people not to kill one another? ... Any country that accepts abortion is not teaching the people to love, but to use any violence to get what they want."

Of course, an enlightened progressive would regard Mother Teresa as a superstitious savage. The cosmopolitan thinker realizes that it only looks like a baby — actually, it's just a lump of cells up until we say it's a baby. But as we now learn, it's a lump of cells with memories:

The unborn have memories, according to medical researchers who used sound and vibration stimulation, combined with sonography, to reveal that the human fetus displays short-term memory from at least 30 weeks gestation — or about two months before they are born.

"In addition, results indicated that 34-week-old fetuses are able to store information and retrieve it four weeks later," said the research, which was released Wednesday.

It's also been proven that an unborn child can recognize its mother's voice.

The more technology teaches us about the unborn, the more obvious it becomes that those who pretend they aren't human beings are the savages."

We read the following report in the April edition of The Obama Timeline: FoxNews.com reports, "Senate Republican Leader Mitch McConnell's campaign has contacted the FBI after a recording of a private strategy meeting was published Tuesday in a liberal publication, claiming the campaign was the victim of 'Watergate-style tactics' to bug the office. Several snippets of the audio from the February strategy sessions were published Tuesday by Mother Jones magazine, along with a lengthy article. The recording, obtained from an unnamed source, included McConnell aides discussing ways to politically damage actress Ashley Judd, who at the time was talked about as a possible McConnell challenger. The aides suggested going after her mental health and views on religion." McConnell campaign manager Jesse Benton states, "We've always said the Left would stop at nothing to attack Sen. McConnell, but Watergate-style tactics to bug campaign headquarters are above and beyond. Obviously a recording device of some kind was placed in Senator McConnell's campaign office without consent. By whom and how that was accomplished presumably will be the subject of a criminal investigation." (At PJMedia.com Hans A. Von Spakovsky points out, "Whoever bugged the meeting room or secretly placed a recording device will be in serious legal trouble—unless he or she was one of the strategists. ...Whoever made the recording is facing the very real prospect of fines and up to five years in prison. ...News reports indicate that the FBI is investigating and that the U.S. Attorney's Office in Louisville has also been notified. But we won't know if the applicable federal and state laws were, in fact, violated, until we know who made the recording." The links are:

In the April Report of The Obama Timeline we read:

More Americans are now collecting disability benefits than are working in the nation's manufacturing sector. One significant federal fiscal problem is that once an individual starts collecting disability benefits, he rarely returns to work—even if his disability ends—and when there are few available jobs, there is less of an incentive to even want to recover. WND.com quotes Dr. Marvin Fischbach, "a psychiatrist who works directly with patients on disability. Fischbach generated controversy with a powerful opinion piece, charging that the disability system creates 'a vested financial and psychological interest in not getting better while still applying for disability.'" According to Fischbach, "The system is a crisis for the individual [and] many should never have applied for disability. ...Patients come to me with mild to moderate symptoms of depression, that will get better, and do get better. But they get on disability and many are lost forever to gainful employment, lose their self-sufficiency, and lose their self-esteem. Some beneficiaries are severely mentally ill and truly disabled, but I'm not talking about them. ...People on disability develop a lifestyle, then their children are acculturated into the disability way of life." The child then "begins to see this as normal. ...Once you're on the program, the government doesn't encourage you to work, and there seems to be no verification that you are still disabled. ...Abuse is common, and the system is enabling people to abuse themselves. ...The effect of the system is destructive to individuals and society." NPR has observed that the Social Security Disability Insurance program has become "a de facto welfare program for people without a lot of education or job skills."

Five Decades of Lies Help Dems Create Monolithic Black Vote

By Larry Elder · April 11, 2013

14 Comments

As recently as 1956, nearly 39 percent of blacks voted Republican in that year's presidential election. After the Civil War, Abe Lincoln's Republican Party easily carried the black vote -- where blacks were allowed to vote. Unwelcome in the Democratic Party, most blacks voted Republican and continued to do so through the early part of the 20th century. It wasn't until 1948, when 77 percent of the black vote went to Harry Truman, who had desegregated the military, that a majority of blacks identified themselves as Democrats.

Yet, as a percentage of the party, more Republicans voted for the passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 than did Democrats. For his key role breaking the Democrats' filibuster and getting the act to pass the stalled Senate, Republican Sen. Everett Dirksen, a conservative from Illinois, landed on the cover of Time magazine. President Lyndon Johnson called Dirksen "the hero of the nation." The Chicago Defender, then the country's largest black daily newspaper, applauded Dirksen's "generalship" for helping to successfully push through the bill.

Older black voters sometimes explain they're opposed to Republicans because of the "racist" Southern strategy. But Richard Nixon speechwriter Pat Buchanan, credited with inventing the "Southern strategy," considered the Democratic Party the party of the racists. Buchanan said: "We would build our Republican Party on a foundation of states' rights, human rights, small government and a strong national defense, and leave it to the 'party of [Democratic Georgia Gov. Lester] Maddox, [1966 Democratic challenger against Spiro Agnew for Maryland governor George] Mahoney and [Democratic Alabama Gov. George] Wallace to squeeze the last ounces of political juice out of the rotting fruit of racial injustice."

But before that, another pivotal event occurred that helped the GOP-as-racist meme. In 1960, during the presidential campaign, Martin Luther King Jr. was arrested following a sit-in at a segregated lunch counter in Atlanta. Hundreds of other protestors were released, but King was jailed on a trumped-up probation violation for failing to have a Georgia driver's license.

King's aides reached out to then-Vice President and Republican presidential candidate Richard Nixon. They also reached out to the Democratic nominee, John F. Kennedy. Bobby Kennedy called the Atlanta judge handling the case. Shortly after that call, the judge released King. Nixon, according to Harry Belafonte, a King supporter, "did nothing." Is that true?

Nixon, it turns out, had a much closer relationship with King than did Kennedy. In the Nixon Presidential Library in Yorba Linda, Calif., records show considerable handwritten notes and correspondence between Nixon and King. This includes a 1957 letter from King acknowledging their previous meetings, which thanked Nixon for his "assiduous labor and dauntless courage in seeking to make the Civil Rights Bill a reality," and praised him for his "devotion to the highest mandates of the moral law."

But in 1960, on the eve of the election, Nixon was in a tough spot. Nixon's public silence might be misconstrued as acceptance of King's arrest. On the other hand, as a candidate for his boss's job, Nixon worried about the political costs of appearing ungrateful if he chastised President Dwight Eisenhower for not taking stronger action. Eisenhower, however, was content to let the Justice Department handle the matter.

According to historian and presidential biographer Stephen Ambrose, while Nixon made no public comments, he telephoned Attorney General William Rogers to find out if King's constitutional rights were being infringed, thus opening the door for federal involvement. Nixon, a lawyer, was concerned about the ethics of calling a judge to get him to release someone.

Nixon, writes Ambrose, told his press secretary: "I think Dr. King is getting a bum rap. But despite my strong feelings in this respect, it would be completely improper for me or any other lawyer to call the judge. And Robert Kennedy should have known better than to do so." That Bobby Kennedy, also a lawyer, nevertheless made a phone call to the judge did not alter the issue of whether it was appropriate. In retrospect, an easy call, but not at the time.

Two million pamphlets titled, "'No Comment' Nixon Versus a Candidate With a Heart, Senator Kennedy," were distributed in black churches. Never mind that in 1956 Nixon revealed he was an honorary member of the NAACP. Or that Nixon pushed for passage of the '57 civil rights bill in the Senate. Or that Time magazine wrote that Nixon's support for civil rights incurred the wrath of one of his segregationist opponents, Sen. Richard Russell, D-Ga., who sarcastically called Nixon the NAACP's "most distinguished member."

But the GOP-is-racist meme can be heard nightly on MSNB-Hee Haw and in political science and history classes all over the country. Actor Morgan Freeman calls the tea party racist. Democratic National Committee Chair Rep. Debbie Wasserman Schultz, D-Fla., tells us that the GOP wants to "literally drag us all the way back to Jim Crow laws."

Keeping blacks ignorant of history remains crucial to this caricature of the Republican Party -- and to the monolithic Democratic black vote. Not so black and white, is it?
