JT: This is interesting. Weren't Ruth Bader Ginsburg's parents poor, working-class Jews?

JT: Spontaneous thought: Could it be that Michelle Obama America's first shemale ladygentleman, which in itself is a misnomer because Michelle Obama is everything but a lady and a gentle person. A simple YES or NO will do ... or perhaps in this case ... MAYBE!!

At <http://pamelageller.com/2014/10/prominent-turkish-scientist-proposes-gas-chambers-for-jews-gets-grant-to-study-it.html/> we learn that "Hitler's Mein Kampf has been a number one bestseller...for over a decade—has awarded a university professor a grant to study the possibility of building concentration camps and gas chambers to annihilate Jews. ... It is not easy to fight anti-Semitism in a country where there are 400,000 potential jihadists and anti-Semitism is an award-winning virtue.

The human rights activists, instead of finding anti-Semitism investigated, may in the end find themselves investigated.

The Turkish head of the physics department at Bilecik University, who proposed to revive the Nazi death camps, a month later was awarded a fund to sponsor his research from Turkey's state scientific institute." The Professor Ali Ihsan Goker, has already tweeted, "Treblinka will be ready soon. Constructing the railway to transport jews [sic] at the moment.

JT: Does evil comes out of Africa: AIDS, Ebola, Obama?

...[T]he good news is, is that it's not an airborne disease ... We know what has to be done and we've got the medical infrastructure to do it. But this is an extraordinarily virulent disease (Ebola) when you don't follow the protocols. We're also going to be working on protocols to do additional passenger screening, both at the source and here in the United States. All of these things make me confident that here in the United States, at least, the chances of an outbreak, of an epidemic here are extraordinarily low," says Obama at <http://www.whitehouse.gov/the-press-office/2014/10/06/remarks-president-after-meeting-ebola>.

JT: Ebola comes from Africa. Does Ebola understand what protocols are. I didn't know diseases had intelligence to understand protocols!!! Obama doesn't even understand protocols when it comes to receiving state guests at the White House like Benjamin Netanjahu or the Dalai Lama. By the way, a protocol is:

- 1) "The forms of ceremony and etiquette observed by diplomats and heads of state;
- 2) The first copy of a treaty or other document prior to its ratification.
- 3) A preliminary draft or record of a transaction."

Questions:

- 1) Is Obama planning on granting Ebola diplomatic status?
- 2) Is Obama planning on making a treaty with Ebola?
- 3) What is the record of transaction Obama is planning to make with Ebola?

Obama has been called a cerebral leader! The problem with this accolade is that Obama's cerebral gyri is posterior.

JT: Barry! You idiot! The country's name is the United States of America, not the United States of Africa.

JT: In the October issue of The Obama Timeline, Don Fredrick reports on the comments made by Tom Frieden, the director of the Center for Disease Control. Tom Frieden is a pro-Obama supporter. Frieden's comments show how far into Obama he has crawled. What follows are the essential remarks made by Tom Frieden. Don Fredrick's comments in parenthesis are in bold font and they show how ignorant Tom Frieden is. Perhaps this is the reason Obama has so much confidence in him

According to Tom Frieden, “A travel ban is not the right answer. It’s simply not feasible to build a wall—virtual or real—around a community, city, or country. A travel ban would essentially quarantine the more than 22 million people that make up the combined populations of Liberia, Sierra Leone, and Guinea. When a wildfire breaks out we don't fence it off. We go in to extinguish it before one of the random sparks sets off another outbreak somewhere else.”

(Frieden is, of course, not only incorrect—he is ignorant. When a wildfire breaks out, a firebreak is created—areas of land are cleared around the fire so that it has no fuel to burn when it approaches. Frieden has apparently never heard of firebreaks, moats, drawbridges, or even Ellis Island.)

Frieden continues, “We don’t want to isolate parts of the world, or people who aren’t sick, because that’s going to drive patients with Ebola underground, making it infinitely more difficult to address the outbreak.”

(Frieden does not explain why an Ebola patient in Liberia would go “underground” simply because he cannot fly to the United States. Why would he not seek treatment in Liberia?)

“It could even cause these countries to stop working with the international community as they refuse to report cases because they fear the consequences of a border closing.”

(That is absurd. Why would a quarantined country ignore outside help and allow its citizens to die?)

“Stopping planes from flying from West Africa would severely limit the ability of Americans to return to the United States or of people with dual citizenship to get home, wherever that may be.”

(Yes, and that is the point: to make it difficult for people in Ebola-infested nations to travel to other countries and spread the virus. After a 21-day quarantine they could be allowed to travel.)

“In addition to not stopping the spread of Ebola, isolating countries will make it harder to respond to Ebola, creating an even greater humanitarian and health care emergency.”

(That is also absurd. No country would be totally isolated. Aid and assistance and medical workers would still be allowed into the country to treat patients and work to stop the spread of the virus, but anyone who goes in would be carefully monitored before they are allowed to go out.)

“Importantly, isolating countries won’t keep Ebola contained and away from American shores. Paradoxically, it will increase the risk that Ebola will spread in those countries and to other countries, and that we will have more patients who develop Ebola in the U.S.”

(It is ridiculous to claim that restricting travel to and from a nation like Liberia would “increase the risk” that Ebola would spread out of Liberia. Such a statement defies logic.)

“People will move between countries, even when governments restrict travel and trade. And that kind of travel becomes almost impossible to track.”

(It is correct that travel restrictions would not provide a 100 percent guarantee that no one from Liberia could enter the United States. But not enacting a travel ban would certainly guarantee that people from Liberia will enter the United States.)

“Isolating communities also increases people’s distrust of government, making them less likely to cooperate to help stop the spread of Ebola.”

(Why would a quarantine make people distrust government? It should be evidence that the nation is taking action to protect non-inflicted people.)

“Isolating communities and regions within countries will also backfire. Restricting travel or trade to and from a community makes the disease spread more rapidly in the isolated area, eventually putting the rest of the country at even greater risk.”

(Frieden is essentially arguing that it is better to have the virus spread than be limited to some areas.)

“To provide relief to West Africa, borders must remain open and commercial flights must continue.”

(Commercial flights can be banned, while charter flights can still be allowed to permit aid, supplies, and medical workers to enter nations like Liberia.)

“There is no more effective way to protect the United States against additional Ebola cases than to address this outbreak at the source in West Africa.”

(But there is no reason dealing with the outbreak in Africa cannot also be accompanied with travel restrictions.)

“What works most effectively for quelling disease outbreaks like Ebola is not quarantining huge populations.”

(In fact, quarantining those infected populations is perfectly logical. That is why, for centuries, lepers were kept isolated from the rest of the general populations.)

“What works is focusing on and isolating the sick and those in direct contact with them as they are at highest risk of infection.”

(Frieden apparently does not understand the meaning if the word “isolating,” as that is precisely what travel restrictions would accomplish.)

“Americans can be reassured we are taking measures to protect citizens here.”

(Allowing people to travel from Ebola-stricken nations to the United States would seem not to reassure anyone.) “Today, all outbound passengers from Guinea, Liberia, and Sierra Leone are screened for Ebola symptoms before they board an airplane.”

(The passengers have their temperatures are taken and they are asked if they have been exposed to Ebola. Those steps will hardly prevent a person with the Ebola virus from entering the United States.)

“Travelers from those countries will be escorted to an area of the airport set aside for screening. There they will be observed for signs of illness, asked a series of health and exposure questions, and given information on Ebola and information on monitoring themselves for symptoms for 21 days. Their temperature will be checked, and if there’s any concern about their health, they’ll be referred to the local public health authority for further evaluation or monitoring.”

(“Take their temperature, trust that they do not lie on a questionnaire, and have them monitor themselves for 21 days” hardly seems like the way to protect Americans.)

JT: Ton Frieden is a perfect example of someone whose nose was white, it subsequently changed to brown, and has now become black!

Also in the October issue of The Obama Timeline, we read from the Daily Mail Sam Greenhill reports on the violence perpetrated by ISIS fighters as they battle to take the city of Kobani (also often spelled Kobane): “Thirteen-year-old Dillyar cannot get the image of his cousin being beheaded out of his mind. The pair were fleeing Kobane and running down a street when Islamic State fighters blocked their exit. Dillyar managed to slip through their grasp but his cousin Mohammed, 20, was seized, and gave a blood-curdling scream as one of the black-clad maniacs drew out a knife. ‘They pushed him to the ground and sawed his head off, shouting ‘Allahu Akbar,’” the schoolboy told me yesterday. ‘I see it in my dreams every night and every morning I wake up and remember everything.’ ...According to those who escaped, the jihadis’ savagery is more hideous than anyone feared. Headless corpses litter the streets of the besieged Syrian border town, they say, and some of the mainly Kurdish townsfolk have had their eyes gouged out. Refugees who made it to Suruc, just across the border in Turkey, tell of witnessing appalling horrors in hushed tones, as if they can barely believe it themselves. ...Ahmed Bakki, a farmer from a village near Kobane, said his cousin, a 48-year-old father of seven, stayed behind when the rest of the family fled. ‘We phoned my cousin and IS answered his phone. They said, ‘We’ve got his head, and we’re taking it to Jarabulus (an IS stronghold).’” He added: ‘An English teacher in our village tried to reason with them, but they just called him a kaffir (non-believer) and tied him to their car and dragged him away. We heard they beheaded him later.’ ...This ‘scorched earth’ policy is being waged by jihadis whose most brutal members seem to be Europeans. ‘They are Chechen, they are English, they are from all over Europe. We know because we can hear their accents,’ said Mr Bakki.” (Don Fredrick comments: Obama is letting Kobani fall and allowing its citizens to be slaughtered because, as Secretary of State John Kerry has stated, the city is “not a strategic priority.”)

JT: Secretary of State John Kerry is in the same situation as Tom Frieden. However, John Kerry doesn't understand his own ignorance either.

JT: I ask this question: Why should anyone get upset about this kind of jihadi behavior. The Koran tells them to do it. We must not forget that the Koran is a HOLY book. Furthermore, jihad is noble!, ... because ...

“The U.S. State Department endorsed on Wednesday a controversial anti-terror handbook published by Canada’s Muslim community that refers to jihad as ‘noble’ and urges law enforcement to avoid using terms such as ‘Islamic extremism.’ The handbook, published earlier this month by two Canadian Muslim community organizations, was so controversial that the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP) flatly rejected the manual and ordered its officers not to use it. Yet the State Department’s official anti-terrorism Twitter feed, called Think Again Turn Away, appeared to endorse the controversial handbook on Twitter and linked to a positive article about it. ...The handbook, titled United Against Terrorism, has become a contentious issue for the RCMP since its release. Several sections of the guide instruct Muslim community members not to cooperate with police while others claim jihad ‘is a noble concept.’ The RCMP ultimately decided to reject the book, citing its ‘adversarial tone.’” State Department spokeswoman Carolyn Glassman says, “[We were] simply sharing information about a new product related to counterterrorism. Our reposting does not connote an endorsement.” The manual states, “Do not refer to terrorists as ‘jihadis.’ This only emboldens them and gives them a legitimate status in the eyes of the vulnerable. Terrorism is not jihad. Jihad is a noble concept in Islam.” (<http://freebeacon.com/national-security/state-department-endorses-handbook-calling-jihad-noble/>) According to Pamela Geller of AtlasShrugs, “This booklet is a product of the National Council of Canadian Muslims, which is Hamas-CAIR in Canada.” (<http://pamelageller.com/2014/10/state-department-endorses-handbook-calling-jihad-noble.html/>)

At <http://thehill.com/blogs/blog-briefing-room/221034-report-vp-bidens-son-hunter-discharged-from-navy-after-positive> we read: “Hunter Biden, the 44-year old son of Vice President Biden, was discharged from the Navy Reserve this year after testing positive for cocaine, The Wall Street Journal reports. The paper reports that after joining the Navy as an ensign (Second Lieutenant) in 2013, he reported for duty in Norfolk, Va. He was drug tested in June 2013 and the test was positive for cocaine, according to the paper’s sources. Hunter Biden was discharged in February of this year.”

JT: Asked about the incident, Joe Biden reportedly stated: "Cocaine? What's cocaine?"
